Is working four days a week enough?

0 In the trial, it was nearly impossible for companies to assess

A the benefits for all people involved.
B the output of a particular employee.
C the financial success of a four-day week.
D the long-term effects for a company.

1 One piece of advice given to companies in the trial was to

A offer training on how to work more efficiently.
B focus on the success of the company as a whole.
C make employees define their own targets.
D involve the employees in re-structuring the business.

2 From a financial point of view, the four-day week

A lowers expenses for recruiting new staff.
B requires lowering the employees' wages.
C encourages employees to work harder for their pay.
D means lower profits in the beginning.

3 In evaluating the trial, the companies indicated that they

A are unsure whether to go on.
B need clearer regulations by the government.
C would like an economic study to be done.
D find the outcome very positive.

4 Ms Schor points out that, regarding the trial, companies

A had too high expectations.
B were specifically chosen.
C consciously decided to participate.
D doubted a positive outcome.

5 According to Mr Ryle, the four-day week is now a worldwide topic because

A workers are questioning old concepts.
B the media are advertising the benefits.
C labour unions have become involved.
D the trial has raised the public's interest.

6 In one country, the majority of citizens

A are in favour of working fewer hours per week.
B have elected politicians who support a four-day week.
C participated in a poll on working fewer days per week.
D have chosen to work fewer days per week.

7 As to the legal aspects of a four-day week,

A most governments are unwilling to support the trend.
B companies are protesting against regulations on this issue.
C relevant laws are being introduced.
D citizens are putting pressure on political parties.

You are going to listen to a talk about Ockham's Razor, a theory on how people make decisions. First you will have 45 seconds to study the task below. Then you will hear the recording twice. While listening, choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D) for each question (1-7). Put a cross (☒) in the correct box on the answer sheet. The first one (0) has been done for you.

After the second listening, you will have 45 seconds to check your answers.

A lecture by Dr Jemma Green

0 The principle called Ockham's Razor was

A supposedly created by a religious scholar.
B intended to reform the church.
C to be the start of a religious movement.
D to help people make moral choices.

1 The principle states that when looking for a solution, people

A choose the one with the smallest number of variables.
B consider the pros and cons of all the options.
C test their hypothesis a few times first.
D ask others for clarification.

2 The principle can be applied to the way some

A meals are prepared.
B material for cloth is made.
C people choose their life partners.
D insects create containers for their food.

3 At one point, Dr Green realised that acting according to this principle

A helps people understand the laws of physics.
B results in people doing what is in everybody's best interest.
C leads people to do the wrong thing at times.
D saves a lot of natural resources.

4 At her workplace, Dr Green intended to

A introduce organic food and soft drinks.
B reduce the firm's ecological footprint.
C prove the principle of least action.
D convince people to avoid packaging.

Tonquelle: Sprecherin: Green, Jemma: Green energy for lazy people. ABC, Ockham's Razor. https://www.abc.net.au/radionational/programs/ockhamsrazor/green-energy-for-lazy-people/11741470 [10.10.2023] (adaptiert).

5 In reaction to her first measure, Dr Green's co-workers

A wanted a green bin each.
B argued green bins were unnecessary.
C considered recycling too much of an effort.
D welcomed the chance to be more sustainable.

6 Dr Green's boss

A was unsure about the plan.
B needed some time to be convinced.
C was in charge of sustainability.
D went along with her efforts.

7 Without personal trash cans, the co-workers

A started to occasionally separate their trash.
B demanded their trash cans should be returned.
C asked for a green trash bin for each of them.
D tried to produce as little trash as possible.

You are going to listen to a recording on the phenomenon of “voluntourism”, which combines travel and volunteer work. First you will have 45 seconds to study the task below. Then you will hear the recording twice. While listening, choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D) for each question (1-7). Put a cross (☒) in the correct box on the answer sheet. The first one (0) has been done for you.

After the second listening, you will have 45 seconds to check your answers.

Voluntourism

0 In order to become voluntourists, people have to

A pay money to a company.
B qualify as particularly social.
C spend time in the country beforehand.
D prove to be able to help.

1 For Pippa Biddle, being a voluntourist was

A a positive experience throughout.
B necessary to graduate from school.
C an adventure that changed her.
D helpful in choosing her future career.

2 Pippa was surprised to see locals working early as the team thought

A there were only voluntourists on site.
B locals were not allowed on site on their own.
C locals refused to work with volunteers.
D locals generally arrived after the volunteers.

3 Local people were already on site because they

A enjoyed working without the voluntourists.
B had to prepare the site for the voluntourists.
C had been asked to show more enthusiasm.
D preferred working at that time of the day.

4 Pippa was told to keep her discovery secret as it might

A have a negative impact on locals.
B make volunteers leave immediately.
C shed a bad light on volunteering.
D lead to similar negative discoveries.

5 As she grew older, Pippa understood that

A what she had seen was an exception.
B other volunteer programs were better.
C she benefitted from what she had seen.
D what she had experienced was common.

6 Back home, Pippa tried to

A complain to the company organizing the trip.
B cancel future voluntourism activities.
C convince friends to avoid the program.
D tell the people in charge about the problem.

7 For Pippa, a major problem of voluntourism programs is that

A voluntourists are only skilled for certain tasks.
B they fail to focus on those who they should support.
C some projects are supported more than others.
D they fail to teach volunteers what the locals need.

5 One major advantage of the reform is that

A medical prescriptions will be free of charge.
B patients will be treated more efficiently.
C family doctors will be more easily available.
D patients' privacy will be secured.

6 Around twenty years ago, the efforts to reform failed because

A there was a lack of interest.
B the technology was inefficient.
C there were financial problems.
D they were carried out unprofessionally.

7 Healthcare professionals who were confronted with the innovations

A demanded more technical support.
B were quite optimistic at first.
C reacted in different ways.
D organised a formal protest.

8 With the new attempt at reform, the NHS will

A allow more freedom of choice.
B establish special helpdesk services.
C work with a national team of experts.
D be monitored on a regular basis.

9 In future it will be necessary for

A doctors and nurses to receive IT training.
B health facilities to fulfil certain requirements.
C hospitals to regulate their finances more carefully.
D patients to take on more responsibility.

London's best quirky restaurants

0 ___
Sketch turns eating and drinking into a whole new experience, boasting several venues at its base near Regent Street that are among the best restaurants in London. The hardest part is choosing between the three-Michelin-starred Lecture Room, the woodland-themed lunch venue, Glade, the brasserie-style Gallery, and The Parlour, an eccentric patisserie, restaurant and bar.

1 ___
Settle down for a quirky culinary experience at Dinner by Heston Blumenthal, a two-Michelin-starred restaurant that's consistently voted one of the best restaurants in the world. The celebrity chef taps into Britain's rich culinary history with unusual results, such as the signature Meat Fruit starter, where chicken parfait is served in the guise of a clementine.

2 ___
Nibble on pan-Asian cuisine in the futuristic dining room at Circus, created by British designer Tom Dixon. Glamorous eating and drinking is not all that occurs at this Covent Garden restaurant, as dinner is combined with various surprise cabaret and circus acts who parade across the tables.

3 ___
Take your children to the Jungle Cave, one of the most fun restaurants in London. Kids go wild experiencing the sounds of waterfalls, lightning and rain, as they spot animals and real tropical fish. Close to Piccadilly Circus and the West End's many theatres, shops and attractions, this family restaurant offers a two-course kids menu and activity packs.

4 ___
This Asian fusion restaurant in Covent Garden boasts a pioneering interactive ordering system projected onto the table, making it one of the coolest restaurants in London. At Inamo, you can place orders via a 3D menu, choose from a selection of virtual tablecloths, find out about the local neighbourhood and even order a taxi home, all from the comfort of your seat.

5 ___
Dining at Notting Hill's Beach Blanket Babylon is like stepping between a Georgian English manor house and a French chateau. If the vintage furnishings, imposing statues and all-round extraordinary decor don't inspire awe at this celebrity hotspot, the seasonal, modern European food will.

6 ___
Mix arias with appetisers at Bel Canto. This opera-themed restaurant near Hyde Park serves up French fine dining with a difference: it's delivered by waiters singing opera classics. So, sit back, relax and enjoy the music – don't worry, you'll not have to sing for your supper.

Golden Buddhas, dwarf palm trees and giant peacock feathers give Archipelago's interior a quirky feel, but it's the menu "staples" such as crocodile, kangaroo, and ostrich that really makes this one of the most unusual places to eat in London. This Fitzrovia restaurant certainly reaches out to intrepid diners with options such as python carpaccio, and jerk alpaca.

Eat within the walls of a prison at The Clink Restaurant based at HMP Brixton. Many of the ingredients are sourced from prison farms around the country, while everything is cooked and served by the prisoners as they train for careers in hospitality after their release. Not only does this unique dining experience help with rehabilitation, the food is excellent and of good value too.
